DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Although this house is in a ruinous state and only the walls are standing, these are of log construction -- wide hewn logs with dove-tail joints. The house was at one time covered with 'insul-brick' [asphalt shingles] and planks; the road side shows where there was an addition. There are foundations remaining here and where this addition was pulled away from the main house, the exposed logs are rotten. There is also the remains of a porch on this side (later addition). The roof is burned out, but the rafters [ridgepoleless] remain. House contained at least four rooms and is of 2 storeys.

[This house's days would appear to be numbered.]

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

Unfortunately, the future of this log house seems to be very doubtful, however, with its 2 full storeys, this is a representative example of the settlers dwellings in Garrett County. In fact, it might even be called substantial [log construction being synonymous in most minds with cabin size; it is larger than the Drane House, G-2] and solidly built (dovetail joints have prevented the customary sagging and pulling. House is interestingly sited on edge of hill, with stream below (signs of erosion of hillside). House's condition is symptomatic of other log houses in area, a once common, but fast disappearing form of construction.

[See Fuller-Baker Log House, G-10.]
